Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. If anything, those guidelines need to be strengthened. Dear Mr. Schmitten,

The oceans are essential to earth. The interactions have not even been worked out except to know that the oceans are key to the chain of life on earth. One of the most interesting new areas of study is the life that lives at ocean volcanic vents, in sulfur levels and at temperatures that would not be thought to support life at all.

More importantly, our own species is ocean dependent. Our very blood evolved out of ocean water.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. The stakes could not be higher for life on earth of all kinds. The fish are canaries of the mines of our world.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

On Tuesday, April 20th, 2004, the US Commission on Ocean Policy cited increasing pressures from pollution, overfishing and residential development as it called for sweeping changes in how the U.S. manages the oceans.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

I encourage you to suggest these prescriptions for better ocean health:

- Protect fragile ocean habitats through the use of protected areas and other tools;
- Transform failing fisheries into sustainable ones to guarantee safe and abundant seafood;
- Reduce dead zones by curbing polluted runoff that creates lack of oxygen and kills marine life;
- Enforce conservation laws to protect ocean wildlife and essential ecosystems;
- Protect our shores from oil by maintaining a moratorium on offshore oil and gas drilling;
- Explore ocean ecosystems by doubling federal investment in ocean science, exploration and education over the next 5 years;
- Reform ocean management by coordinating the hodgepodge of laws and agencies responsible for ocean protection;
- Enact adequate safeguards on aquaculture sites to protect marine ecosystems.

I am deeply invested in the well-being of our oceans. A healthy marine environment is important to our economy, and gives my family, my friends and me a place to relax and have fun. Please help ensure the Ocean Commission's report protects our state by including the strongest possible protections for our nation's oceans and marine life.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Please don't be swayed by the special interest working to weaken existing protections. Already the fish from our rivers, lakes, and streams are barely surviving under great stress. If you should get lucky and catch one of them, you are not supposed to eat it because of high levels of mercury and other pollutants. Please don't allow the fish in the ocean to go the way of the those in the rivers, lakes, and streams. Do everything in your power to protect the health of our oceans.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. I can't tell you how important this issue is to future generations. I want to leave a world with clean, viable oceans providing a never-ending supply of food and a safe environment for the majority of living creatures for my children and grandchildren and their children and grandchildren. To say yes to further pollution of the oceans is like using one's well for a toilet. I believe we have an obligation to keep the ocean environment safe for it's creatures, but even if you don't, surely you must agree that it would be the height of foolishness to pollute or damage the source of so much that we humans need to live on earth. The earth's oceans are not separate from us. They are literally part of us. Please act strongly on this issue on behalf of all creatures.

Oceans sustain such a large part of our ecosystem and thus a large part of the lifecycle. When these fish species are exhausted, this will in turn effect all other species, which will eventually get back to humans. It is imperative to realize the interconnectedness of this earth.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I was notified by OSPIRG about special interest attempts to weaken existing ocean protections.

Healthy oceans are not just a public good; they are not just for commercial purposes. Oceans are a critical link to all life. Please support the recommendations put forward by the recent comprehensive study on ocean health. Work to transition building and housing away from the coast. Require proper treatment of run-off. Work to increase biodiversity and fish stock. All of this represents a huge improvement to our quality of life in the intermediate and long runs. It will also provide economic opportunities for many.

I first learned about the state of the oceans from The Weekly Reader in the third grade (1968). It has been almost 40 years since these "flags" were raised, and we have now lost the opportunity for incremental continuous improvement (a much cheaper alternative to emergency action). Our willingness as a nation to hold our people and our businesses to a low standard is appalling and the result is clear. It is frankly criminal that we have allowed ocean health (along with a myriad of other environmental issues) to become a crisis.

Will the Oceans Report spur the appropriate government action? The Bush Administration has selective hearing when it comes to data, so perhaps we should frame this as a "national security issue". Maybe Tom Ridge should be in charge.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Please strengthen them nationally and work with other countries to strengthen theirs.

In the 21st century, the oceans are a resource that have to be managed, like our forests, in order to sustain them. The seafood industry is a powerful component of our economy and a significant portion of our population consumes seafood regularly. To sustain the demand and provide for future generations you must not be short-sighted when developing pertinent guidelines. Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Because our oceans are so vast it is difficult to think that we could impact them with pollution. It has been clear to me that over the years our pollution has had a significant negative impact on our oceans. I am concerned that returning our oceans to their natural state may take many more years than it took us to pollute them. We need to start now! I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

I grew up at the Jersey Shore. My family has been there since 1921. I am in favor of very strong protection guidelines. Our ocean is too fragile to be tampered with by special interests who do not see the health of our oceans as a top priority.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. There are numerous actions that need be taken and here are just a few:

Reduce dead zones by curbing pollution runoff especially from giant hog farms, that reduces oxygen and kills marine life.

Enforce existing conservation laws.

Reform ocean management by coordinating the hodgepodge of laws and agencies responsible for ocean protection.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

We have always felt that fish were safe to eat , even when the meat produced in factories (chicken and beef) were not... now the fish is being proven to be dangerous and those that aren't are being over-fished to the point of extinction.

We need to strengthen our ocean habitats, even if it means having less ourselves, since otherwise we will eventually eliminate all our seafood.

We need to not only make it less polluted with chemicals from businesses. and from ships that travel the world and from sewage and garbage that we dump there, but also from noise-pollution that fishes and sea mammals are extremely sensitive to. Every SAILING-SHIP that leaves the dock, creates noise pollution, so imagine how horrifically noisy our navy ships must be...and our testing of WMD!

We need to coordinate with the many different groups that are contributing factors to the deterioration of the ocean wilderness, and work together to create a world that can survive 'with' us and not 'despite' us.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

When I was a kid in the 40's and '50's my Dad told me that the ocean was a limitless resource and that we'd be well advised to eat its bounty since the land, even then, was showing signs of exhaustion.

I took his advice. But now I don't because we've overfished it, poisoned it, and because so many of us live near the coast, we've destroyed much of the boundary habitats on which we depend.

If we cannot curtail our urge to breed ourselves out of existence, then, for the time we have, we've got to be more careful of the resources which support us.

I urge you adjust your thinking to the long term protection of our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Your grandchildren's lives depend on your decisions.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Please, consider the recent report from the Federal Oceans Commission, a board made up of very moderate individuals as a starting point for action. The continuing deterioration of coastal areas jeopardizes the long-term health of our oceans, and consequently our fishing industry, tourism and other important sectors of the economy.

I have watched the salmon return up the Columbia river and know that we can turn around threatened habitats. I have also seen the effects weak regulatory practices as many of my friends and family were fisherman in Maine. The failure to act quickly enough has decimated the small fishing fleets. We need to protect and preserve our oceans now so future generations will also be able to appreciate the diversity and abundance.

Sincerely,

Alex Stevens

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I understand that I should not eat salmon too often because of the probable concentration in the fish of contaminants such as mercury. I read that the oceans are being overfished by high-tech methods that are causing fish populations to dwindle. The profit motive is killing the goose that lays golden eggs.

Jacques Cousteau made a generation aware of the wonder and importance of the ocean. As a member of that generation I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. We need to begin looking into the welfare of future generations.

My wife and I have personally seen the changes in coral reef health, especially a dramatic loss of color. In our case, it was snorkeling in EXACTLY the same place nine years after our honeymoon. Dear Mr. Schmitten,

We have many urgent issues in front of us these days. With war and terror occupying so much of the headlines we cannot lose sight of the health of our oceans. And equally importantly, we cannot permit the urgency of war and terror priorities to distract us from the unscrupulous and insidious maneuvering of special interests. As you are well aware, this administration too easily spurs science, or amends scientific conclusions to suit business.

Your duty is to generations, not these special interests. Please hear the voices of the youth who cannot get on your calendar, and the generations to come who will rely on your diligence. Abide the more objective science which transcends the bottom lines of current businesses or those opportunists seeking personal profit at the expense of the ages.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

As Director of the office of Habitat Conservation, I am sure I don't have to tell you about the complexities of our Ocean habitats. Certainly, the regular discoveries of ocean creatures, plants, and the marvelous interrelationships between land and water warrant close protection. To this day we are still unlocking the mysteries of our oceans and how we are all tied together.

In this technological era when we have the power to research as well as protect, I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Let's all take a step into the future while we can, the oceans are worth it. If you don't think they are worth the utmost protection then I mourn the loss to society as well as our global community. For as surely as we turn our backs on the lowliest of creatures in the sea - we also turn our backs on ourselves.

Have courage fighting big industry and their deep pockets on this issue. I stand behind you and support you in your job - to protect habitats, not sell them out to the highest bidder.

May the forests and oceans be with you, always.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Right now there are so many things wrong with the overall health of our oceans it would be a huge mistake to allow further transgressions in the eco-system.

Please not only consider leaving things as they are, but increase restrictions regarding the hauling of toxic cargo such as oil. Stop the ocean fishing plants that scrap the bottom of the ocean and destroy this precious system let alone the over fishing that is happening every day.

The oceans are huge, but we do have an affect on this system and we will ultimately suffer from it's destruction.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

The oceans of our planet are the most vital ecosystem we have. The oceans provide us our fresh water, food, the air we breathe and jobs for hundreds of millions of people worldwide.

The US needs to become a leader in protecting our oceans. If our oceans are not protected, we as a civilization will fail. In the not too distant future, certainly within our lifetime (if not already), we will begin to see, are seeing changes that are affecting the planet's ability to survive. We have to look to the future and not only concern ourselves with the greed of today.

I would hope that in the future we could focus on how we could get other nations to protect our ocean environments to a greater extent. Revising the Magnuson-Stevens Act will only serve to weaken existing protections to fish habitats, and will serve as a poor example to other nations. I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. With the changes that are evident to the world's fish populations and coral there cannot be any doubt as to the effect that humans have already had on our oceans. Please work to strengthen what we already have in the way of essential fish habitat guidelines.

Our oceans are so vitally important to our present and future health. Thank you for your efforts to improve their condition for now and in the future.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

As a lifelong resident of New jersey, I've spent a lot of time at the shore. Oceanside destinations are also frequent vacation spots for my family. I value the oceans for swimming, and for the amazing array of wildlife present.

I'm quite concerned that fish habitat is threatened, and we need to increase protection, not relax them. Too many species are in decline, and their future is not assured.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and strengthen, not weaken, existing essential fish habitat guidelines. There is nothing more important to our survival than a healthy environment and one of our largest ecosystems is the oceans.

As the wealthiest nation in the world, as world leaders, we should be setting an example to the rest of the world as to being stewards of this earth, but instead of creatively showing the world how to sustain our environment, we have been the worst example by draining its resources and polluting our air, water, oceans, destroying vital habitats that are crucial to our own survival. Following suit, in order to feed the Big Mac appetite of Americans, our neighbors south of us are destroying precious rain forests that are crucial to the very air we breathe, all in the pursuit of money. We are just as responsible for the destruction of the rain forests as they are. We taught the world that it is okay to destroy in the name of the almighty buck.

The oceans are being destroyed worldwide.

We are a leading polluter. We have the means, the knowledge, the creativity, to find a solution and change something for the better that would affect the whole world. Instead we choose to keep destroying. That is our legacy. Kill anything that gets in the way of the big profits, people, oceans, forests, rivers, earth. Where will we live when it is all gone? The moon, outer space, mars? So far those have not proven to sustain life.

Our planet is a gift that we should live in gratitude and service to as caretakers.

Please fight to make people in government and business understand that diversity is the whole key to our survival. Many different species; humans, trees, plants, animals, birds, insects, organisms, contribute to the health of the planet and we all need each other to survive. We all need clean waters, earth, air and healthy habitats.

With more people living longer and more and more population of human species on this planet, the balance of nature is crucial to the health of our bodies, our minds and our souls, and this is critical to having a healthy nation.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

As the oceans go, so goes humanity, so goes the planet. I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

We can no longer take a cavalier attitude toward the health of our oceans. We must protect them from over-fishing, from the massive degradation of factory fishing, from industrial pollution and other polluting human activity.

When we've done that for as far as our national boundary allows, then we must work internationally with all other countries to create worldwide protections for all oceans. But it all begins at home. Do not sell the very future of our planet to special interests.

Sincerely,
Lana McGraw Boldt

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

In the wake of overfishing, habitat destruction, pollution, and overall poor stewardship, marine life in our oceans is declining. Please do not allow special interests to weaken any existing ocean protections and fish habitat guidelines. In fact, I would urge you to go even farther in protecting our oceans with new, more stringent guidelines and protections.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Throughout my news reading life I have read stories of how the ocean is decreasing in life. As we find more and more evidence of ocean diversity and of chemical abundancies that can create new life preserving drugs and of ocean based energy production concepts we also destroy these resources with pollution and over harvesting. Please work to preserve life NOT just increase short term human wealth.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Having wintered in Ft. Pierce, Florida with my parents, I began to appreciate the integral link between the sea and the shores. The habitat of both are truly relying on each other, and we on them. They are not only a source of recreation, but also a "gauge", if you will, as to the health of our entire planet. I cannot imagine risking any one part of this precious coexistence. With this in mind, I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

It is important that we are still able to have our families enjoy the richness of the ocean and give back to the ocean the nourishment it has supplied people for centuries.

Perhaps there can be more extensive education on the harmful effects of overfishing and in the ways we treat the environment. Most of all, following through with enforcing regulations on companies who contribute to toxic dumping in our oceans.

If it affects the ocean, it affects ocean life and ultimately will affect land life as well.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

What many people don't realize is that even though the ecosystem the oceans ennable are huge and therefore apparently could absorb the detriemental impact of man's desire for more resources, it can be one of the most fragile since it never needs to really adapt to man, and some species of coral, etc. can virtually never be replaced, taking centuries to rebuild the habitat it supplies to countless species.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Just yesterday I read of a commission that will petition the congress to form a new department to coordinate the many agencies that regulate the use and abuse of our oceans. This commission suggests that the ocean should be considered a part of the entire environment and that all of the parts be considered in the total.

To date the Bush administration has demonstrated the short sighted philosophy of giving over to industries control of so many of the environmental issues. As a registered Republican I hope that President Bush is not known for his legacy against our environment.

I have sailed through out the western Pacific and have even found plastic sacks and submerged barrels of waste oil about the Marianas.

We have the responsibility to maintain and protect, to communicate with other countries for the health and sustainability of the environment. Over fishing and putrifying the seas is short-sighted behavior.

I understand the cross-cutting nature of your profession and congratulate you for your public service.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. It is my knowing that our oceans are in serious trouble; it is time to protect them, not further weaken protections.

Already coral reefs are being destroyed due to pollution. We have dead zones lying off our coasts in which virtually nothing lives, and our fisheries have been stretched beyond their limit.

It's time to start doing something right for a change. Please do not cuddle up to the special interests that seem intent to lead us all down the road to hell. Stand up to them, and start safeguarding our oceans; that is what you are supposed to be doing.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

The estuaries in our oceans are where the cycle of life for ALL of us begins... to degrade our oceans is to degrade the chances our species has to survive on this planet in the long-term.

There are too many horrific practices in place right now, lets get a grip on these, and improve the way we interact with our well spring.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Without good habitats we cannot eat the fish we all take for granted.
