Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

It will take decades to fix the damage of each year.

The local community's benefit cannot possibly outweigh the global needs to maintain healthy oceans and supporting their food chains.

Mr. Bush's environmental policies will, in four years, put more of our environments at risk than we can fix in forty.

Please, protect what is left, find better alternatives than stripping down the existing protections and know that when November comes, you may find yourself a welcome seat at the new administration's table.

Mr. Bush has created enough 'quadmires'. Do we really need one more?

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. The oceans support life on this planet without which there would be no life on this planet. The alarming deterioration of ocean habitat, the overfishing of several species, and the pollution of the oceans with chemicals and toxins from the land can only hasten the demise of ALL life on this planet. If we do not take better care of the oceans, we will be the next species that will become extinct!

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Our oceans are in need of stronger, comprehensive management that focuses on entire ecosystems and helps to reduce the impact of human activity.

It can be difficult to explain to fisherman why they must fish under restricted conditions or why a farmer must modify the application, type and quantity of fertilizer used. As the director of habitat conservation, this is just the kind of leadership you must provide even if not politically expedient. Thank you for your time and consideration.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Ocean habitats, which include coral, sea grasses, sandy bottoms and rocks, all provide fish with the food, shelter, spawning areas and nursing grounds that are essential to their continued survival. The various habitats that are essential to fish survival are collectively called essential fish habitat.

Currently, under the Magnuson-Stevens Act, essential fish habitat is protected under federal law. However, the National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS), the agency in charge of federal fisheries, is currently considering making changes to the existing protections.

I again urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Our oceans are in crisis. Though the ocean seems limitless and bountiful, our oceans no longer sustain as much life as they used to. Overfishing, habitat destruction, and poor management have all led to this alarming decline in the health of our oceans.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I have learned that plans are being made to weaken the laws which protect essential fish habitat in the oceans which border our country. These areas, currently covered under the Magnuson-Stevens Act, provide critical habitat for fish and other marine organisms. Much of this habitat is critical for the survival of juvenile fish.

Our oceans are at risk from pollution of all kinds and the threat of more drilling being made by the Bush administration. I'm sure that the efforts to reduce protection for our oceans comes from special interest groups which support Bush, most especially the oil companies.

It is our duty to protect and clean up our oceans for future generations.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Overfishing has already devastated fish populations around the globe and the majority of the world gets its supply of protein from fish. If these resources are not managed responsibly there will be global food crisis which will effect everyone na dhave dire economic consequences. The protection of portions of marine habitat benefits fisherman and the environment alike as it provides a stable source population which exports fish into other areas where the fisherman fish. There is no reason not to protect this habitat. I enjoy eating fish and would like for my children to have this same opportunity

It is more profitable for business in the long run if fish habitats are protected; the increase in human population increases demand for fish supply, so if the habitats are protected in the short run it will hurt business, but the resurgence in fish population will allow future business to prosper with greater magnitude than at current levels.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I am very concerned about the poor state of our oceans. I hope you'll take the opportunity to protect our oceans when you are asked to comment on a draft report from the U.S. Commission on Ocean Policy. The final version of this report will shape a comprehensive policy for restoring the health of our threatened oceans. Please carefully review this draft and suggest that the Ocean Commission's final report to the President and Congress includes strong measures to protect our oceans.

Specifically, I encourage you to suggest these prescriptions for better ocean health:

- Protect fragile ocean habitats through the use of protected areas and other tools;
- Transform failing fisheries into sustainable ones to guarantee safe and abundant seafood;
- Reduce dead zones by curbing polluted runoff that creates lack of oxygen and kills marine life;
- Enforce conservation laws to protect ocean wildlife and essential ecosystems;
- Protect our shores from oil by maintaining a moratorium on offshore oil and gas drilling;
- Explore ocean ecosystems by doubling federal investment in ocean science, exploration and education over the next 5 years;
- Reform ocean management by coordinating the hodgepodge of laws and agencies responsible for ocean protection;
- Enact adequate safeguards on aquaculture sites to protect marine ecosystems.

If you have already taken action on behalf of the oceans and/or commented before the draft review came out, thank you!

I am deeply invested in the well-being of our oceans. A healthy marine environment is important to our economy, and gives my family, my friends and me a place to relax and have fun. Please help ensure the Ocean Commission's report protects our state by including the strongest possible protections for our nation's oceans and marine life.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

I have read that we here in the MidWest are contributing to our oceans problems through the use of farming practices which result in large amounts of fertilizers, pesticides, and soil runoff washing into the streams and rivers thus ending in the Gulf of Mexico. I have read that this has resulted in dead zones.

I strongly urge that you play an active role in creating the cooperative forces to restore wetlands which serve as a buffer to these runoff problems. I also ask that you push for framing practices which can lessen the use of pesticides and that farmers be educated in using fertilizers which do not result in large quantities ending up in our waterways.

Our villages and cities as well need education on the impact of non-point runoff and its contribution to our oceans problems. Parking lots and residential areas contribute large amount of petroleum products and lawn chemicals to this runoff problem and end up in our waterways, which empty into the oceans.

I ask you as the Director of the Office of Habitat Conservation to use the full power of your organization to strengthen the guidelines protecting oceans and all its inhabitants. We are connected and we need to work together in solving these issues.

I thank you for your working on the behalf of all of us. I look forward to your actions and stewardship for conserving, protecting, and managing the "bounty" of our planet.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Our oceans should be managed for future generations. Native americans would try to manage for 7 generations to come. We could learn from their example.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Recently, there was a report that there are "dead spots" in our oceans caused primarily by pollution, overfishing leading to habitat destruction. We must protect what we have so that future generations can have a sustainable future.

Please protect our oceans!

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Our oceans are in crisis and we need to do everything possible to protect them. I have personally experienced the pollution that can happen; having visited the same area of the Pacific for over 30 years and experiencing horrific pollution, especially in the last ten years. We need to save the most important natural resource that we have on this planet, for the life that exists within them, and for generations to come.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. If any action is needed, it is to protect the oceans more than what is currently in place. The ocean is not a never-ending smorgasbord or bottomless dump. There is a limit to what it can endure and still survive and support its inhabitants. You must be realistic, instead of political, and accept that the limit is approaching fast. Please protect what's left of our oceans for this generation, and our descendents.

Recently I went to the movies to watch the most recent Tarantino movie. Within the pre-show entertainment, I saw facts about our ocean -- that it contains 95% of the world's life and remains 90% unexplored. As a scientist, I am aware of the delicate balance all life on this planet participates in keeping; by destroying our oceans, we are destroying ourselves. I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. The already degraded condition of the world's oceans is well known and has been extensively documented both by scientific and commercial groups. One of the best hopes for restoring this "cradle of life" is to make sure the essential fish habitats are protected strongly. There is a bleak future for the oceans without those areas producing new living things.

It is in the country's longterm interest to make sure that the greed of certain special interests does not further imperil the world's oceans. Thanks for your help.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I am disturbed to hear that there are some folks who think that their personal profits are more important than the preservation of the oceans we rely upon for food, recreation and as habitat for a wide variety of animals that impact the food chain all the way back to humans.

The existing protections are barely keeping the overfishing, pollutants and coastal recreation activities from overwhelming our coasts and ruining what we have left.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Maintaining the health of the world's oceans and fish supply is critical. We have an obligation to future generations to protect our oceans and their unique species, which once decimated can never be created again.

We additionally need to be aware of indicator species such as coral reefs that can tell of the health of the water we recreate in and obtain food from. If the waters are unsuitable for ocean life, they are likely unsuitable for humans as well.

Please take these thoughts into consideration when making your decisions on the essential fish habitat guidelines. Please do not weaken them.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Already so many aspects of our natural environment have been despoiled. We have endangered species, to say nothing about those that have already disappeared. The air we breathe has become, and will become, even more polluted with the present weakening of regulations. Do you think we might at least protect our oceans for our enjoyment and use in accordance with sensible fishing regulations? An entity which covers 2/3 of the earth's surface deserves to be considered important in regard to its global environmental contribution and, of course, its value in providing food for the world's population. Not adhering to stringent regulations will severely impact both in a negative direction.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Thanks for the opportunity to comment before decisions are made.

I understand that there are industries and groups that are against protection of the oceans' resources. I understand that for reasons of profit or other short-term gain, these groups may choose to ignore the larger impact they have on the ocean's living systems when compiled with the activities of all the ocean's exploiters. For this reason, we must take responsibility to educate groups that use the ocean that their impact is not taken alone. That the gains they make now will lessen the gains we could all benefit from in the future, and that we all must do what we can with the knowledge we have to manage our resources wisely. We must protect the oceans, yes, and we must also discover how we benefit from this protection, and that the oceans' living systems have inherent value.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

We have already seen a decline in fisheries and species abundance, and alarming signals about the health of our Oceans. One presidential administration can leave a long legacy in policy changes. Our current administration has strong ties to special interests, who are not concerned with sustainability or biodiversity issues.

As an administrator, you are under a great deal of pressure from many quarters. I urge you to respect and honor the title of your office, and not to let the Bush administration pressure you into leaving a harmful legacy for our oceans. Please, strengthen the fish habitat guidelines, and conserve those habitats!

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

As you know, ocean habitats, which include coral, sea grasses, sandy bottoms and rocks, all provide fish with the food, shelter, spawning areas and nursing grounds that are essential to their continued survival.

Please do not let the reckless and destructive special interests of a few private companies destroy the long term benefits that our oceans would provide, in exchange for the relatively meager short-term profits that would only slightly benefit the bottom-lines of these short-sighted, greedy special private interests.

The American public, and the stewardship of our natural resources and environment, must take precedence -- we all deserve at least that and so much more.

Thank you.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Our oceans no longer sustain as much life as they used to. Overfishing, habitat destruction, and poor management have all led to this alarming decline in the health of our oceans. Please stick to the guidelines and protect our oceans.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Since entering office, President Bush has systematically dismantled our most basic environmental protections, and Maine citizens have suffered from his actions. Maine's Acadia National Park suffers some of the worst smog and haze of any National Park in the country, and Maine's once-famous salmon contain high levels of mercury and toxic PCB's that make them unsafe to eat. (KCDC notes: These are not only environmental but economic issues for Maine. Tourism and fish that are safe to eat are cornerstones of our economy.) At the same time, President Bush has given in to pressure from his campaign contributors in the coal and power plant industries and weakened and delayed implementation of the Clean Air Act.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Sincerely,
Pamela Gay-Donhower

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. I live in Iowa. One of the states which is contributing greatly to the dead zone in the gulf coast with it's heavy load of silt and nitrates. I consider this to be a very serious broach of midwestern states responsibility to their neighbors in the south. Please continue to have strong policy that will protect fish habitat so that the heavily beleaguered fishing industry can continue to have a viable income for their families.

Fish are good for heart health. But not if they are poisoned by industrial chemicals and other man-made interference.

Are you willing to take responsibility for the ill health of the planet? This is not an idle concern.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

It is incredibly important that we take any and all measures to maintain healthy functioning ocean ecosystems. Seemingly small changes to various habitats can drastically alter the balance of these delicate cycles. I am sure that you, as well as many of the special interest groups lobbying for these changes, would be sorely disappointed in the future the fisheries economy collapses. Good decision making needs to be balanced with informed decisions based on sustainable use of the oceans, not with money. Thank you for taking the time to read this letter.

Isn't enough that all fish already have restrictions on amounts of "safe" consumption?

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Overfishing, pollution, and poor management have led to an alarming decline in the health of our oceans. At this point, the world's oceans need all of the legislative protection they can get.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

The U.S. Commission on Ocean Policy that was created by Congress in 2000 has issued a 413 page report that states that human action has seriously jeopardized the health of our oceans. Only major changes in how we manage this life giving resource on all levels will offer the hope of decreasing the damage that has been done. We need to act with the vision and understanding of how our actions will impact the next seven generations. It is essential that we do all that is humanly possible to protect all aspects of the oceans eco-systems and the creatures that dwell therein. We are responsible for and accountable for leaving the oceans healthier than we are experiencing them now. I strongly urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. There has been so many stories the media is covering about the poor state of our oceans. We are not only putting one of our food resources in danger, we are putting the future of our children's ocean resources in danger. We have got to find a way to use our resources wisely and protect our oceans for future generations. I urge you to look closely at balancing the needs of the fishing industry, our food health concerns as well as the protection of fish habitat for future generations.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Our oceans are in trouble, have been ever since Jacques Cousteau first expressed his concern about them over 30 years ago. Our oceans no longer sustain life as they used to, and are in declining health. This means our fisheries are also in difficulty.

I therefore urge you to take the necessary steps to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

I am appalled that the Bush Administration would consider revising rules that protect our vital waters. They are a heritage for future generations.

Thank you for your consideration. Please keep me advised as to how you will proceed.

Our earth is an ecosystem, with interdependent parts. If we keep allowing the weakening of various parts, at some point the whole system will break down. I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. In fact, they ought to be further strengthened. I'm certain you know how vital habitat preservation is. I'm also sure you know all too well how much of a problem overfishing is. I don't need to tell you how important spawning and nesting grounds are to the health of our oceans, and also our fishing industry. Please do not weaken fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

The federal oceans commission's Chairman, Adm. James D. Watkins, said yesterday "[o]ur oceans and coasts are in serious trouble", as the commission unveiled its draft report. The commission, appointed by Bush and comprised mostly of Republican scientists, basically says the nation's coastal waters are in crisis and recommends strong action be taken immediately.

Special interests are now lobbying hard to get the Bush administration to weaken existing ocean protections. I ask you, in your capacity as guardian of our nation's fish habitat, to stand firm against weakening existing essential fish habitat guidelines, and to propose stronger guidelines to address the crisis that faces our ocean coastline and its fish habitats.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

As a responsible recreational fisherman, please allow me to share with you some of my concerns regarding the health of our marine waters. I grew up on Long Island and learned to fish soon after I learned to walk. My family and I have always eaten our catch, and have done so partly because of the health benefits of eating fish. Sadly, this can no longer be the case due to the increasing danger of PCB and Mercury poisoning among other things. This is even assuming that there are still fish to be found! I am appalled that our government continues to bow to the interests of big business instead of protecting the health of our waters and ourselves.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Anyone who has spent even the smallest amount of time by the coral reefs in the Northern Hemisphere is shocked and saddened by the obvious dying of the reefs. As we eliminate all forms of viable life on our public beaches, we sterilize one of our greatest treasures. We--YOU--have the power to restore these waters to healthier state.

For once, let the current administration take a pro-active, protective stance towards our environment.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Our oceans are in crisis. Though the ocean seems limitless and bountiful, our oceans no longer sustain as much life as they used to. Overfishing, habitat destruction, and poor management have all led to this alarming decline in the health of our oceans.

even our fish farms in the NE usa are getting like our feed lots, full of excrement and parasites, not very healthy. the world needs the ocean even more for food and industries are polluting the oceans at record amounts, fishing grounds are being overfished and we are losing jobs because of governmental mistakes,

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Just adding my encouragement for you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

The chemical run-off issue is as big as the overfishing issue, and all are important. We have to think of the big picture, in terms of entire ecosystems and spans of hundreds of years. What we do in a particular place, at a particular time, has never had such importance as now, when our industrial economy has become so global. This exponential trend will continue, so our practices must become cleaner.

Please do what you can.

Sincerely,

We, the people, depend upon government to protect us where we cannot protect ourselves. The ocean's "health" is intertwined with OUR state of health. Business interests often do not address this simple fact, so it is up to our elected leaders to "keep the boat afloat".

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

The degradation of ocean environments really hit home to me when I returned to the beach fronting our old home on Maunalua Bay in Hawaii after 35 years. What had once been a clear cove where individual rocks were identifiable was clouded with mud. The schools of fish we used to watch are gone. I understand that much of the reef is dead.

>From what I read, this is all-too-common a story.

Please do what you can to save the earth's remaining fisheries and ocean habitats from the damage that can so easily occur if we don't protect them.

Sincerely,

The oceans may seem unimportant in a time when so many things are going on in our world, but once they are destroyed they will not be able to be rebuilt or replaced. Taking away protection will make the destruction happen quicker and I urge you to consider what this could mean for the future of our planet.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. I live in Hawaii . The Ocean is a vital source of food for our people and our state's economy, based on tourism, demands a healthy ocean.

Concerns about overfishing and pollution must be taken seriously. I urge you to take positive steps to protect our oceans.

Sincerely,
Linda L. Rich

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Over the past year I have read with alarm the scientific reports of the condition of our oceans! I cannot fathom any reason for weakening the existing essential fish habitat guidelines or any other guidelines that are meant to stem the tide of degradation. I urge you to protect our oceans!
Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

As the name indicates, essential fish habitat guidelines are the foundation of a healthy fish population and healthy ocean ecosystems in general. Weakening protections for these areas would further the crisis already facing our nation's waters. Please protect our nation's aquatic heritage and not weaken these guidelines. Thank you!

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Fish as a food source increasingly has come under scrutiny because of pollution, and more habitat for aquatic ecosystems is being lost every hour. Water is the blood of Earth, and if it is too polluted, plants and animals on land and in sea will suffer. Please, do not weaken existing ocean protections.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Oceans are critical to the overall health of our planet - and that is something that cannot be easily regained once it is destroyed.

PLEASE don't allow existing guidelines to be lessened - the health of our one and only planet is too high a price to pay.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. The oceans, like so many other parts of our Earth, are integral parts of our ecosystem.
