Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Please consider future generations when making decisions about the stewardship of the environment. Weakening pollution standards at the behest of special interests is both short-sighted and counterproductive. Making a few more dollars today is not worth compromising the waters in our oceans. Conservation today is an investment in the future of the planet. Anything other decision is ultimately bound to have grave consequences for generations to come.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

The heedlessness of the ocean industry (fishing / charter ships etc.) that "caters" to the demands of a populace by cheap and easily available products must be stopped.

To minister to the needs of the oceans is not exactly cheap but it is very clear that irresponsible exploitation rules the roost.

There must be strict laws and penalties, enforcement of the same at various levels and a public awareness campaign to turn this monster that is killing the oceans, around.

Is a ravaged ocean what you desire to leave as a legacy for your grand children sir ?

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Strengthen them instead, honorable Steward of the oceans.

Respectfully yours,

Already, Inuit women in Canada, tested by the WHO, have intolerably high levels of mercury and PCP's in their breast milk from being at the top of the ocean's food chain. How much longer can life be sustained on earth if we continue this poisoning of the ocean and air on which all life depends?

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I've recently been informed that the National Marine Fisheries Service has requested public comments regarding proposed changes to the Magnuson-Stevens Act. I wanted to be sure to include my opinion among those comments you receive. Having worked on an offshore island seabird colony this past summer, good stewardship of the resources in our oceans is near and dear to my heart. I for one am convinced that there should be no slackening of regulations that protect marine environments off our coasts and hope that any revisions to Magnuson-Stevens serve only to strengthen the protections already in place.

Please keep my comments in mind when considering any revisions. Thanks for your time.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

We have overfished the cod of the north Atlantic almost to extinction. We have severely damaged the migrations of certain eastern bird species by allowing the destruction of the inedible crab along the New Jersey and Maryland shore, who's roe fortify the birds during the migration. We have overfished numerous shellfish so that they are either no longer profitable for American fisheries or they are no longer taken in American waters. We have not allowed the seas to replenish its bounty. We must continue to hold the line on such protections until, once again, our shores can contribute its bounty to feed our people, without overfishing. The current restrictions allow such replenishment to continue as it should. Any disruption would set us back and we would have to wait all the longer for what we desire.

Thank you for considering these thoughts.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

How could anyone even consider weakening protection when it isn't even enough. It should be tightened not weakened. We will reap what we sow as our planet is showing us with glaring devastation. We deserve what we sow. It is a shame that all humans have to suffer the loss and destruction of our natural resources and habitat so that the greedy, selfish, irresponsible humans can live their lives without considering their effects on the planet and the consequences we are paying today and will continue to pay for generations to come. Anyone who participates in this backwards protection is not a solution to the problem, but a shameful part of the problem and going in the wrong direction. This is not responsible leadership and it is unfortunate if this is the best they can do to protect our resources. People are ignoring the signs of destruction. They think that makes it go away. Dear Mr. Schmitten,

When I lived in Alaska, I witnessed firsthand the damage that can be done to fish stocks by overfishing, dumping of contaminated mine tailings, oil spills, and logging to close to the banks of streams.

I urge you to consider the inseparable nature of healthy oceans and quality of life. We in the U.S. are vastly wealthy, but our health will decline commensurate with that of the oceans.

Our physicians and glossy health magazines urge us to consume more omega-3-rich salmon in the fight against heart disease and cancer. Yet the salmon in our grocery stores is mostly either farmed or caught by factory ships in the open ocean. The farmed salmon has been found to be laced with PCBs; factory gillnetters sweep entire schools of salmon (and anything else that happens to be around) into their gillnets, preventing all but a tiny number from returning to their birthplace to spawn. The tuna fish our children crave can poison them with heavy metals spewed into the air by oil refineries and coal-fired power plants; the methods used to catch them also kills our beloved, intelligent, and playful friends, the porpoises.

Please, protect our oceans and do not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Sincerely,
Sandra Spicher

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. I have two little children and it is sad to see and hear all the bad things that are happening to our marine life. Man has to stop being so short sighted worrying only about today and destroying the future. It is our responsibility to be leaders in both our country and the world to show how by saving the oceans, it is truly the only way to save ourselves. Please step forward and be the leader that as adults we should all be to the children of our country and the world.

Please do not bend to pressure from the Bush administration to weaken our existing, essential ocean protections. So much thought and work have gone into these protections thus far, and it would be criminal to move backwards now.

NOW is the time "to do the right thing" by protecting our oceans and marine life that have been severely compromised by over-fishing, habitat destruction, and cruise ship pollution. Years ago, life began in our oceans -- let's NOT have it end there.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

As a naturalist on Catalina Island, I have the oppertunity to introduce the marine environment to thousands of Californian students each year.

Here, on the island it is obvious that California's ocean no longer sustains as much life as it used to. Overfishing, habitat destruction, and cruise ship pollution have all led to an alarming decline in the health of our oceans, where marine life and delicate ecosystems are threatened.

Incredibly, special interests are working to convince the Bush administration to weaken existing ocean protections. The National Marine Fisheries Service is asking the public to comment on whether to protect essential fish habitat

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. For our future generations, so they don't have to read about the amazing biodiversity in history books.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

California's ocean no longer sustains as much life as it used to. Overfishing, habitat destruction, and cruise ship pollution have all led to an alarming decline in the health of our oceans, where marine life and delicate ecosystems are threatened.

Sincerely,
Jim Greenstein

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

We need to stop using the oceans as dumping grounds for everything from excess fish kills to hazardous waste materials. Ocean liners, oil drilling platforms, the list goes on and on. The oceans are a vital part of the earth's environment. Without a healthy ocean, human beings will ultimately die.

Please think long term and not only of the short term.

I would like you to know that I do not want there to be a weakening of the existing essential fish habitat guidelines. If this is an area of doubt about whether weakening the guidelines will have any effect, or not have an adverse effect; its better to not take a chance of destroying what won't ever be brought back. Dear Mr. Schmitten,

The existing laws and guidelines used by our federal, state, county, and city administrations and agencies and international ones as well are not doing enough to protect our marine resources. I feel they should be strengthened to cut the damage from pollution, over fishing, non-native species, and the many other ways man adversely affects the marine ecosystems. Please don't give in to pressures from those who can't work better protection into their agendas. People need to gear their activities, work, political agendas, and use of the resources in such a way as to ensure all our marine ecosystems will always function as they did before man interfered with them. This will better insure they always provide mankind with the valuable resources we want from them.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. The state of Washington is particularly dependent upon a healthy oceanic environment for its anadromous fish which migrate in and out of the oceans' waters. The majestic whales, which migrate through our waters, especially the Gray whales, depend upon clean ocean waters and healthy food sources in those waters. Overfishing, both by people in our country, but as well by people of many nations, have contributed significantly to the decline in fish and whale populations that either reside in, or use the oceans as habitat.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. Although our oceans may seem so vast and plentiful that they will last forever, the ecosystems within them are actually quite fragile. Our own ecosystem on land depends on this fragile oceanic environment. Subtle differences in temperature and water quality can destroy entire species and habitats.

We need to preserve, in particular, the fish habitats off of our nation's coasts. While many workers depend on the fish for business, and people demand them for food, these are not reasons to let fishing go unchecked. On the contrary, their crucial role as both food and income means that we must take every step to preserve them and develop sustainable methods. Once a fish is gone, not only will we lose that type from our diet and put people out of work, but we will also remove an important link in the food chain.

Please do not weaken existin ocean protections.

Sincerely,

Melissa Hahn

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Given the pressures of human uses, it is necessary to conserve and protect as much marine habitat as possible in order to maintain sustainable fisheries for future generations, including my own two children. We cannot afford to let lobbying for short-term profits by large fleet owners to impact the long-term viability this life-giving resource.

The strongest and least ambiguous fishing quotas and environmental regulations are necessary to maintain and improve the marine eco-system.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

The Monterey Bay Aquarium Sea Watch Guide resides in my wallet and I strictly consult it before consuming any fish. It is comforting to know that Alaskan Salmon, for instance, has tight regulations to prevent over fishing. Between industrial pollution, oil spills and habitat destruction (particular for farming fish or for harvesting certain seafoods such as shrimp) the oceans are under attack.

It is our responsibility to protect the oceans for future generations.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Oceans and beaches are one of the few refuges where I can feel peace and calm in this fast paced world.

If we destroy this resource, we will be ruining one of the most wonderous resources that this Earth has to offer.

It is the duty and the mission of the government to listen to the voice of the people and not corporate interests.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Like the land we live on, we may think that everything is a renewable resource, when in truth i believe that there is no such thing. Sure, it can last a long time, but probably not as long as we would like it to. Sure the SUN will always be there, but will we always be protect by the atmosphere to enjoy the sunlight. Its just like the ocean, it will probably always be there, but what will be in it further on in the future to enjoy and cherish. We cannot only think about the present, we must think about the FAR future. The ocean provides us with so much, not only fish and such, but if you think about it, it also provides us with our fresh water (water cycle) and if we don't take care of it now, it won't be a good source for the future generations.

Sincerely,
Angelica

I have been wondering for sometime if our Government actually knows we have no chance of preserving our earth due to our neglect and as a result see's no need to protect it. This would make sence based on many of our Government and Corporate leaders actions don't you think?

Sometimes I'm glad I never had children to see the legacy we are providing them. What good stewards we have turned out to be.

Why would anyone think of doing such a thing at this time, has anyone in your department looked, recently, at the 'best available science' lately, pertaining to the 'health' of the oceans and of fish habitat.

No greed over immediate profit can justify any degradation of environmental protections. Do republicans not have children as well, and do they not know that there are some short term profits that come at too high of a risk to the environmental health and safety of their childrens' planet?

There are many things which money cannot buy, a clean biosphere for one. That can only come from prevention - one of your duties.

Always be vigilant to the temptations of greed!

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I just finished writing a letter to my governor asking that (even though I am currently several hundred miles from the nearest ocean) he support legislation that would create healthier oceans. I've lived near various oceans most of my life and have personally seen a great deal of localized degradation. Stressors on our oceans continue to significantly increase. Our oceans are overfished and discharge of toxic pollutants have damaged the marine environment and the animals that inhabit it.

I care about the world's marine environments and am troubled to know that they are suffering such deep distress. I am writing today to let you know how much I care and to also ask that you work to protect those oceans. Please do not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. It is critically important that these guidelines remain in place and that we as a nation do everything possible to ensure that our oceans and their inhabitants have the opportunity to healthfully exist well into the future.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

The ocean is a vast resource, but not without vulnerability to destruction by human activity.

Our oceans no longer sustain as much life as they used to. Overfishing, habitat destruction, and poor management have all led to this alarming decline in the health of our oceans.

Please do what is necessary to protect this resource for generations to come. All of our children will be grateful.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Protecting these areas helps the tourism industry (less beach closures), the fishing industry (a more consistent supply of fish), and the overall marine habitat.

We must not be known as the generations who let the oceans die and ruined the ocean ecosystems for centuries. We have too much technology and too much scientific know-how to be that stupid.

Please to do not weaken ocean protection measures. We are better than that.

Thank you for your service to our country.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Its a fact that we humans are not seperate from our environment at all. What we do to the ocean and land, we do to our self, although the reprocssion is not immediate. I would like to have a child one day and he or she might like to as well. What would a world be like without clean sea food, teeming coral reefs, whales and unpolluted fish.

Would you like to be the one to tell a child about how you are sorry for not standing up for our brothers and sisters of the sea.

Our time on this planet will be very limited by how much man made pollution is allowed to enter the environment and thus enter our self.

Please be the hero for us all and do what is right for the immediate and long term sustainabilty of this world we are and extension of.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

I also have a concern regarding the fish we are now eating being labeled most least to give you cancer due to the levels of toxins in their systems. Its just common sense to recognize that minamal accumulations from fish or other foods is going to add up. When do we recognize that the pollution has got to cease?

Lastly, the essential part of our food chain truely has its origins in the ocean. If we kill species off that food chain will be seriously compromised. It will affect the human species as well.

It is crucial that we begin to act responsibly as individuals and as groups.

I am amazed that there would be a question as to whether existing ocean protections should or should not be in place. What kind of message are we sending to future generations, I have confidence it will be one of hope in there will be beauty to sustain us!

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Our oceans no longer sustain as much life as they used to. Overfishing, habitat destruction, and poor management have all led to this alarming decline in the health of our oceans.

As a coastal resident, I see this degradation firsthand in the state of our beaches, our commercial fisheries, and our more and more frequent marine animal strandings and deaths.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Long-term management of our oceans is needed so there will be fish for my children and grandchildren to eat. It is your duty as a patriotic American and an ethical human being to protect the oceans not the industries that profit monetarily from them. Those industries do not include the full cost of using the oceans in their cost analyses. The oceans are dieing and need help, not more abuse. When the oceans die, we die.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,
Re. Damned lobbyists

This is a country of loud special interests groups and lobbyists who have little care for the common good of the general population nor their environment. These greedy self-serving individuals are often short sighted and generally do not care about the long term consequences of their actions. I have a hard time to be sympathetic for these low lives.

It is time Mr Schmitten to be responsible and take action for the well being of ALL individuals on this planet including flora and fauna. Unfortunately, in these gloomy times I find our elected officials to be forgetfull of who they are representing (yes whether elected or appointed). This is not a "four year plan". This is about maintaining if anything else what we have left that functions properly, naturally,in our environment. Lets have a spine Mr Schmitten and stand up to all those who are urging you to adopt the quick fix instant prosperity and short term solution route. It's never easy to make the right decision and sacrifices have to be made. I am prepared to take them!

I urge you to protect our oceans. I urge you to strengthen and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. And, I urge you to think about why and who you are serving.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

Our oceans and natural resouces must not be for sale. Long term habitat and environmental protection should come before profit-seekers.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I have recently become aware that the National Marine Fisheries Service (NMFS) is seeking comments on potential revisions to essential fish habitat guidelines, as laid out in the Magnuson-Stevens. Without knowing many of the details, I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines. It is quite clear that overfishing is irreparably harming certain parts of the ocean ecosystem. Please do everything in your power to protect our ocean legacy for future generations.

Dear Rollie:

It's good to be in touch with you again, and to recall your friendship and helpfulness to us in Cashmere First Baptist Church while I was pastor there! Wish I could talk with you about the case for our ocean coasts! I'm truly appalled to realize the pollution dropped in pristine waters by the growing array of cruise ships which travel up and down the Pacific Coast.

I realize that they have a massive need for a place where they can dump the megatons of waste that they develop, with the huge population on each trip. I enjoyed their hospitality last summer on a trip to Skagway, Alaska--but the waters are becoming more and more polluted: the oceans are not able to handle the waste; something has to be done about it--and I'm counting on you to do the right thing! (It must be a tough job to try to please so many elements of interest and pressures from polluters who make their living depending on the public's inattention. I believe the public is awake and aware of the problem! REV. JIM MERLIN

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I simply cannot fathom that, in the current state of crisis in which the world's oceans stand, our nation would even consider weakening protective regulations for the oceans and the species of plants and animals that inhabit them. We must recognize that we are very near to a point of no return with respect to ocean-life sustainability. Aggressive habitat protection efforts are essential to just maintain the oceans in their current depleted status. I therefore implore you to stand firm against any efforts to undermine the existing regulatory mechanisms we have established to protect our oceans.

Sincerely,

Douglas E. Baxter, Esq.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I am concerned about many practices, such as farming fish, which release additional toxins into our over-taxed oceans.

Every summer we take our children to the coast and enjoy the rich habitat at a local marine research center. It's a delight to see the clean water out there. But it's one of the few places in Puget Sound that is still so clean.

Last year, we lost a large number of fish in Hood Canal when the temperatures rose, partly from alga bloom due to toxins and runoff. The signs are legion, even to a lay-person such as myself, that our lovely oceans are in turmoil.

Please show great care in crafting policies which could have harmful consequences for years to come.

Please think towards the future. Beyond the interests of short-termed factions.

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines.

Current guidelines may not be ideal.
Most citizens have no sense of the details determining policies -- many seem to have no sense of delicate vital dynamics that sustain life in the balance on this planet.

We all have a part to play in serving health--for ourselves, our families, our communities, the environment that sustains life . . . people in positions of authority have special responsibilities (if not powers) to care-fully regard consequences of actions taken (however justified) that impact the equilibrium of elemental grounds.

Dear Mr. Schmitten,

The question is whether (or, presumably, not)to protect essential fish habitat.

Which part of this question is difficult to answer? Is there any rational, sane, devout way to argue against such protection? Is there an interest to be protected that has as its method the destruction of the common life of the planet?

As I urge you to protect our oceans and not weaken existing essential fish habitat guidelines, I also appeal to you to consider how demoralizing it is to suspect that you may be in doubt as to the wisdom of this policy.
